This book's relational theology analogically unfolds a view of a God of enjoyment whose exuberant passion contains the traces of suffering, yearning, permeability, intensity, and impropriety. God, in affectively embracing all living beings, takes on their form, and in incarnating the divine self as hospitable pleasure, vivifies the cosmos.

Review of Elaine Padilla, Divine Enjoyment: A Theology of Passion and Exuberance. Theologically speaking, the trope of divine love is a key element and impetus in this kind of relationship; it awakens us to the distinctive, interweaving, and even parasitical and virulent elements that exist in the cosmos.
